

Old Stone Church Cemetery Burials Cornwall Street, Leesburg, Virginia

compiled by Mary Fishback

The Old Stone Church Cemetery was established for the Methodist congregation. It was located on Cornwall Street and surrounded the Old Stone Church, which was torn down in 1901. The original building was the first Methodist church in North America.

Like all cemeteries, it is a memorial to the people who are interred there. The stones date from the late 1700s and they have stood the test of time. For some of us, they are the connections to our ancestors. Others of them are reminders of people who lived in Leesburg and helped to shape its 250 years of history.

The Old Stone Methodist Church Foundation has maintained and preserved the grounds of this cemetery in a lovely setting of old ginko trees, park benches and a gazebo that tells the history of the church and cemetery. Some of the people buried there include Methodist ministers as well as past Clerks of the Loudoun County courts and everyday people who attended the Old Stone Methodist Church.

The following is a listing of all those we know are buried in the Old Stone Church Cemetery. This list was compiled by the Thomas Balch Library Cemetery Committee and can be viewed in its entirety at Thomas Balch Library or on the Thomas Balch Library website: www.leeburgva.gov, key words "cemetery databases." Due to the condition of the tombstones some of the translation may not be exact. Many stones have been lost to time and the elements. Some of the people may not have had tombstones. We do know there are more gravesites than tombstones. This list was abstracted by Mary Fishback, Thomas Balch Library Cemetery Committee.
